Celebrate Father's Day with MAMBO

Today, Saturday, MAMBO will celebrate Father's Day in mainstreet Oranjestad where customers can buy presents for the King of the House. All businesses will have a large selection of items and not to forget the customary entertainment to delight shoppers all day long. Entertainment will be musical groups Ola Tropical and Tipico Los Amigos and various DJ's. Also a classical car show for all Fathers.

Starting at 2:00 p.m. the beauties of yesteryears will be in the parking lot of La Linda and at 4:00 p.m. they will go on parade till the corner of Djiespie's/Bonita/Fuji Image. All cars will have a Sesame Street actor on board to delight the children.

So, come today with the whole family in the mainstreet, do your shopping, buy a nice present for Father and enjoy the classical car show. The mainstreet will be closed for traffic from 10:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

MAMBO wants to thank the people of Aruba for supporting the businesses of Mainstreet Oranjestad.

On the shoulders of her Giant

By: Roland W. Peterson

Her grandfather was a giant from whose shoulders she could see beyond the horizon

She used his ears as her steering wheel
He was the one that walked on tip toes at night so as not to wake her as he tucked her in

Then one day he told her she was too big for his shoulders
Oh ... how she wished that she stayed small

Now she moved back to his lap
She could not see beyond the horizon anymore
But she was the safest person
in the world

It was on his lap she learned the value of his hugs
It was there she learned how to smile
It was the place where she could count on hugs and smell that peculiar aroma of tobacco mixed with coffee

On his lap she learned that: What you don't have you will never loose
And that those little things do matter
Try sleeping he said with a tiny little mosquito zzzzzooming in your ear

He was her best friend
That man she called Grandpa.

One million caught up in Kyrgyz violence, U.N. says

GENEVA, Switzerland – More than one million people have been affected by the violent conflict in Kyrgyzstan and need food and other aid supplies, U.N. officials said yesterday.

They include some 400,000 people left homeless after fleeing ethnic clashes in the southern cities of Osh and Jalalabad that erupted a week ago. Some 300,000 are displaced within Kyrgyzstan while another 100,000 people have crossed over into Uzbekistan.

"For the moment, we estimate that we will probably need to respond to the needs of more than one million people, displaced people, refugees and people in host families who have been affected by the conflict," Christiane Berthiaume, spokeswoman of the U.N. Children's Fund (UNICEF), told a news briefing.

"It is a planning figure, it could change," she said.

A U.N. emergency funding appeal issued in New York, is seeking more than $65 million to assist 1.1 million people in Kyrgyzstan for six months, according to U.N. sources. A separate appeal for Uzbekistan is planned soon.

The conflict has had "acute and pressing humanitarian consequences" in Kyrgyzstan, including on host families who have taken in people driven from their homes, they said.

At least 191 people have been killed since June 10 in southern Kyrgyzstan in clashes between Uzbeks and Kyrgyz, but interim Kyrgyz leader Roza Otunbayeva told a Russian newspaper interview published yesterday the toll could be 10 times higher.

Today, the U.N. refugee agency plans to launch an airlift of tents and other emergency supplies into Kyrgyzstan, a former Soviet republic with a population of 5.3 million.

Many of the 300,000 internally displaced in Kyrgyzstan have been taken in by families and host communities, but 40,000 of them require immediate shelter, according to the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR).

"The situation in southern Kyrgyzstan remains fragile and tense. There are continued sporadic reports of violence," UNHCR spokesman Andrej Mahecic told reporters in Geneva. "Access for humanitarian workers to many parts of Osh and southern Kyrgyzstan is extremely difficult and limited."

The U.N.'s World Food Program (WFP) said it was already distributing a total of 150 tons of food in Kyrgyzstan and hoped to fly in 80 tons of high-energy biscuits.

There are acute shortages of basic necessities in southern Kyrgyzstan, according to the neutral humanitarian agency.

"The most urgent needs are food, water, shelter and medicines," said ICRC spokesman Christian Cardon. "The people are usually taking refuge in mosques, farms, villages and also administrative buildings that were emptied during the violence."

The Cinemas suggest you "skip the line!"

The Cinemas, located in Paseo Herencia Mall and Renaissance Marketplace, in their continual efforts to improve their service to their clients, announced they are collaborating with SETAR NV to offer subscribers of Aruba's national telecommunications company the option of purchasing their movie tickets via mobile device.

Richard De Veer, GM of The Cinemas made the announcement at their facility in Paseo Herencia, and his team of youthful film enthusiasts demonstrated how moviegoers can now avoid the inconvenience of waiting on long line or perhaps finding the screening sold out.

It is as easy as surfing the net on your mobile browser. Once connected, enter the URL: <http://mobile.thecinemas.aw>.

- Select the film you want to see and click, then choose a show time.

- Indicate the number of tickets you wish to purchase, type in your mobile number and Cinemas Supercard number to earn points, and your e-mail address where the ticket will be sent.

- Once this step is completed, a request for confirmation will be received via SMS;

- To confirm: SMS back to 4444, after which you will receive an SMS transaction code.

- Present the transaction code at the entrance to The Cinemas; via e-mail you will receive a digital ticket.

- When entering to see the show, show your mobile device with the digital ticket where in will be scanned, and voila!

One can also purchase tickets by SMS by simply sending the movie title to 4444; if you need the current schedule, SMS the word "list" to 4444 and they text back your choices. Upon selecting a film you will be sent the schedule for the day, to which you will reply with your required time and number of tickets. You will receive confirmation via SMS with a transaction code. The final steps of the transaction are the same as those of purchasing via URL.

This service is available to island residents with postpaid accounts with SETAR NV, and tickets must be used the same day of purchase. There is a monthly limit of 100 Aruban florins towards tickets, which will appear on customers phone bill, including a one time fee of Afl 0.35 per transaction.

It is the season for all the "super summer" blockbusters, and now clientele of The Cinemas can breeze past the long lines to allow plenty of time to purchase their popcorn and get a great seat.

Jose Saramago, winner of Nobel Prize in Literature, dies at 87

Jose Saramago, winner of the 1998 Nobel Prize in literature for early novels that explored historical themes from unconventional angles and later works in which inexplicable events threaten society's underpinnings, has died. He was 87.

The writer died earlier yesterday at his home in Lanzarote, Spain, after a lengthy illness, according to the website of the Jose Saramago

Foundation.

Saramago, the only Portuguese winner of the literary prize, was 60 before he wrote most of the novels for which he was honored, having worked as a car mechanic, civil servant, production manager in a publishing company and newspaper editor before becoming a full-time writer.

After winning the Nobel, Saramago, though still living in Spain, was feted in his home country. A publisher named a literary award for young writers after him, and the city of Beja in southern Portugal put his name on its municipal library.

Still, he didn't win universal affection from the Portuguese, many of whom hadn't read his work, partly because of its difficult style, Almeida Rodrigues said.

Saramago's first marriage, to Ilda Reis, ended in divorce in 1970. He remarried in 1988. He had a daughter, Violante, born in 1947.

Muppets, Oprah, Buddy Holly to get Hollywood stars

LOS ANGELES, California — What do Neil Patrick Harris, Oprah Winfrey, Buddy Holly and the Muppets have in common? They're all getting stars on the Hollywood Walk of Fame next year.

The Hollywood Chamber of Commerce said Thursday that 30 celebrities will get plaques on the neighborhood's sidewalks next year. Each recipient pays $25,000 for the privilege.

Three stars will be placed during the same ceremony for actors Bruce Dern and Diane Ladd and their daughter Laura Dern.

Also on the motion picture side, honorees include Penelope Cruz, Ed Harris, Kenny Ortega, Gwyneth Paltrow, Ridley Scott, Sissy Spacek, Donald Sutherland, and Reese Witherspoon, as well as the Muppets.

In addition to Harris and Winfrey, television will be represented by Danny DeVito, Tina Fey, Simon Fuller, John Langley, Ed O'Neill and producer John Wells.

Recording artists include Melissa Etheridge, Los Tigres Del Norte, Rascal Flatts, Go-Go's, Slash, Will.i.am, and Bebe & Cece Winans. Holly and Louis Prima are two posthumous recipients.

Study: New dads want to be more than breadwinners

BOSTON, Massachusetts — Today's crop of first-time dads aren't just relishing in the first smile, steps and laugh of their new bundle of joy.

These days they are also garnering increased respect and responsibilities in the workplace just for being a new father, according to a study published by the Boston College Center for Work & Family.

During conversations with 33 first-time fathers, researchers probed how these professional men are striking a work-family balance that may have eluded their own fathers a generation ago, when being the breadwinner often meant missing pivotal childhood moments.

"With these young guys, they're not willing to be robbed of those experiences," said Brad Harrington, a research professor at the Carroll School of Management at Boston College and executive director of the center sponsoring the study.

The research for "The New Dad: Exploring Fatherhood within a Career Context" were compiled over a year by Harrington, Fred Van Deusen, a senior research associate with Boston College, and Northeastern University professor Jamie Ladage.

Ladage's 2007 study on first-time mothers re-entering the workforce helped inspire this fresh look at new dads' role in the home and office.

With nearly 50 percent of the U.S. workforce now made up by women, and nearly 60 percent of all U.S. bachelor's degrees and master's degrees awarded to women, Harrington said the changing dynamic of females in the workplace is affecting how men are behaving in a parenting role.

Young people, and especially new fathers, are redefining what it means to be successful and happy, Harrington said. A solid career trajectory is not the only factor anymore: being a hands-on dad is also topping the list.

In a modern twist, first-time fathers interviewed for the study said that most managers were supportive of their need for flexibility as they adapted to a new schedule at home.

The men also said they enjoyed an enhanced workplace reputation in the eyes of their colleagues, given their new parental role.

The researchers also found that most of these young fathers are still struggling to find a rhythm at home with their wives who also work.

Fathers today, and particularly those in the survey, "have an interest in being more than a hands-off breadwinner," said Harrington.

The majority of the 33 fathers in the survey saw their own mothers curb their careers to manage the home and family, but don't expect their wives to take the same break, he said.

Sense of direction is innate, study suggests

Baby rats have an innate sense of direction in place even before they take their first steps out of the nest, a new study found.

The discovery that rats have a hardwired navigation system could also have implications for human brain development.

Researchers implanted electrodes into the brains of newborn rats in the spots known to control mapping and direction. These areas are known from research done on adult rats, but this was the first time scientists have looked at these neural systems in such young animals.

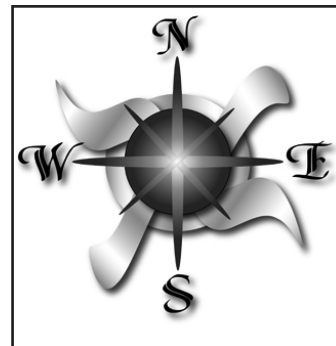

Each neuron communicates with other neurons using electrical signals that are measured by the implanted electrodes. The researchers were surprised to detect activity in the neurons responsible for a sense of direction from the very beginning.

"The rats are so young they haven't had experience beyond the nest, which is so small they can't walk in it," said researcher Francesca Cacucci of the University College London Institute of Behavioural Neuroscience. "The signals are there from the very first time. We assume that these must have been hardwired before."

The scientists were able to differentiate between the three main aspects of the brain's mapping system: the sense of location, the sense of direction, and the sense of distance.

They found that the directional neurons were active first, sending out clear and mature signals when the pups were first born.

The location cells, which tell the animal its current position, were fuzzy at first and became more precise over a period of days.

Finally the distance neurons, which establish how far away things are, came last, when the rats were around 21 days old. At this point all the pieces of the puzzle came together, Cacucci said, and the rats were able to do things like navigate a maze.

Though a similar study would be impossible in humans, because the electrodes are too invasive to implant in babies, the researchers think their findings could suggest that a sense of direction is innate in humans, too.

"The milestones that human infants go through are very much like the ones that young rats go through," Cacucci told LiveScience. "We can extrapolate to some extent and we can assume these cells are doing something in the human brain as well."

The scientists measured no differences between individual rats, so they don't know at this point why some individuals seem to have a better sense of direction than others. The study only included male rat pups, too, so the researchers can't say whether there would be any sex difference at this stage, though Cacucci said she doubts it.

Air pollution tied to breathing problems in sleep

A new study has found a link between air pollution and breathing-related disruptions during sleep.

Conducted by the Harvard School of Public Health and Brigham & Women's Hospital, the authors say this the first attempt to document a link between exposure to pollution and sleep-disordered breathing.

Breathing-related sleep disruptions come in several forms, of which the best known is sleep apnea. It causes people to repeatedly wake up when their airways constrict and breathing is cut off. In many cases, sufferers don't realize they have the condition, which can contribute to the development of heart disease and stroke.

In the study, researchers tried to discover if air pollution — which irritates the airways — has anything to do with sleep disruptions, which affect an estimated 17 percent of adults in the United States.

The study authors pored over data from the Sleep Heart Health Study, which examined the heart health and sleep patterns of more than 6,000 people between 1995 and 1998. They then compared those patterns to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) air pollution data on seven cities: Minneapolis; New York City; Phoenix; Pittsburgh; Sacramento; Tucson, Ariz.; and Framingham, Mass.

The researchers analyzed data on more than 3,000 people and adjusted for factors such as age, gender, smoking and temperature so they wouldn't throw off the results.

They found that incidents of sleep apnea and low levels of oxygen during sleep went up as the temperature rose during all seasons of the year. Sleep-disordered breathing also rose during the summer as air pollution worsened.

Particles of pollution "may influence sleep through effects on the central nervous system, as well as the upper airways," wrote co-author Antonella Zanobetti in a news release, noting that the exact mechanism is unclear. "These new data suggest that reduction in air pollution exposure might decrease the severity of such sleep disruptions."

The study, funded by the U.S. National Heart Lung and Blood Institute, the EPA and the U.S. National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, appeared online June 14 in the American Journal of Respiratory and Critical Care Medicine.

Botox can paralyse your emotions

For Botox users concerned that the muscle-paralysing injections will rob their face of its ability to show emotion, a new study suggests that people injected with the toxin might end up with less strong emotion to display in the first place.

Researchers at Barnard College in New York City found that facial expressions appear to play a role in how your emotions develop, not just in how you display them for others to see.

The study suggests that facial expressions themselves may influence emotional experiences through a kind of feedback loop. In short, Botox - a toxin that weakens or paralyzes muscles - not only changes one's appearance, but also appears to deaden real emotions.

"In a bigger picture sense, the work fits with common beliefs, such as 'fake it till you make it,'" study co-author Joshua Davis, a psychology professor at Barnard College, said in a school news release.

"With the advent of Botox, it is now possible to work with people who have a temporary, reversible paralysis in muscles that are involved in facial expressions. The muscle paralysis allows us to isolate the effects of facial expression and the subsequent sensory feedback to the brain that would follow from other factors, such as intentions relating to one's expressions, and motor commands to make an expression."

Davis explained that "with Botox, a person can respond otherwise normally to an emotional event, e.g., a sad movie scene, but will have less movement in the facial muscles that have been injected, and therefore less feedback to the brain about such facial expressivity. It thus allows for a test of whether facial expressions and the sensory feedback from them to the brain can influence our emotions."

Got any spare change? Give it to Romania

BUCHAREST, Romania — Got any spare change?

Romania's cash-strapped government is asking for donations to a fund set up to boost budget revenues and cushion the impact of the economic crisis, the finance ministry said yesterday.

Earlier this week, the centrist coalition cabinet narrowly won a no-confidence vote in parliament over sharp public sector wage and pensions cuts, key to keeping afloat its 20 billion-euro aid package led by the International Monetary Fund.

"Every person in Romania, except for legal entities, can donate cash into this account," the finance ministry said in a statement.

Donations can be made by bank transfer to a special account and a list of donations will subsequently be published on the ministry's website.

Snoop Dogg not welcome in Dutch city of The Hague

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands — U.S. rapper Snoop Dogg, a frequent visitor to the Netherlands and aficionado of its readily available marijuana, will not be allowed to perform at a free concert in The Hague, authorities said.

The mayor of the Dutch city, public prosecutors and the police have asked organizers of the Parkpop festival, billed as the largest in Europe, to find another act to replace Snoop Dogg "in order to be able to guarantee the open and friendly character and free admission of Parkpop" to be held June 27.

A statement from Snoop Dogg's management released by record company EMI said, "Snoop Dogg is astonished by the decision."

Snoop Dogg usually holds concerts in the European country at least once a year.

"This is all very annoying that the headliner is being removed from the program 10 days before the event," a spokeswoman for organizer Ducos Productions said.

Snoop Dogg is also scheduled to perform at a sold-out conference at Amsterdam's "Melkweg." During a 2008 concert at the same venue, he smoked several joints during a performance and at one point was joined by singer Willie Nelson, who is also co-chair of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

Outside the festival circuit, the 38-year-old rapper, whose real name is Calvin Broadus, has encountered problems.

Until only recently, he had been banned from the United Kingdom after a 2006 fracas involving members of his entourage. Snoop Dogg also pleaded no contest to gun and drug charges in the United States and was barred from entering Australia after failing a character test.

Father's Day turns 100: how did it begin?

Father's Day is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year today, June 19, and it all began when a young woman wanted to honor her dad.

In May of 1909, Sonora Smart Dodd of Spokane, Wash., sat in church listening to a Mother's Day sermon. She decided she wanted to designate a day for her dad, William Jackson Smart. Dodd's mother had died in childbirth, and Dodd's father, a Civil War veteran, had taken the responsibility of singlehandedly raising the newborn and his other five children.

The following year, Dodd wanted to celebrate Father's Day on June 5th, her father's birthday, and petitioned for the holiday to be recognized in her city. Needing more time to arrange the festivities, Spokane's mayor pushed the date back by two weeks, and the first Father's Day was celebrated on June 19, 1910, according to the Spokane Regional Convention and Visitor Bureau.

At the first Father's Day celebration, young women handed out red roses to their fathers during a church service, and large baskets full of roses were passed around, with attendees encouraged to pin on a rose in honor of their fathers - red for the living and white in memory of the deceased. Dodd then brought her infant son along on a horse-drawn carriage ride through the city, bringing roses and gifts to home-bound fathers.

While Congress was quick to officially declare the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day in 1914, after it was first celebrated on May 10, 1908, it took much longer for Father's Day to be legally recognized. But thanks to Dodd's celebration, Father's Day steadily gained popularity.

In 1924, President Calvin Coolidge said that he supported it, in order to establish closer relationships between fathers and their children and to impress upon fathers the full measure of their obligations, according to the Library of Congress.

And the holiday gained more traction in 1938 when a trade organization, the National Council for the Promotion of Father's Day, which was formed by men's clothing retailers in New York City, decided to take up the cause, according to Consumer Rites: The Buying and Selling of American Holidays (Princeton University Press, 1995).

President Lyndon Johnson issued the first presidential proclamation honoring fathers in 1966, but it wasn't until 1972 that President Richard Nixon signed the public law that made it a permanent holiday. Since then, Father's Day has become a time to recognize the many different father figures in our lives.

Great steaks are a family tradition at El Gaucho Restaurant

Mega Skewer

Aruba's longest established and most popular Argentinean steakhouse, El Gaucho, is still going strong after 33 successful years. Two-time winner of the prestigious Wine Spectator Award of Excellence, the restaurant proudly displays the numerous accolades it has received from other such notable wine and food societies as Chaîne des Rôtisseurs, as well as coveted awards for excellence such as the Worldwide Marketing Organization of Mexico, Golden Trophy for Quality Award of Excellence from France, Arch of Europe for Quality from Business Initiative Directions of Germany and International Award for Tourism, Hotel and Catering Industry from Spain.

Recognized around the world for its quality of service and cuisine, El Gaucho's heartiest applause comes from its loyal clientele, who recommend the restaurant to friends and family with complete confidence in their satisfaction.

When asking a frequent island visitor where they go for a great steak, you will find most frequently their #1 choice will be The Gaucho Steak; a generous portion of prime tenderloin, charcoal-grilled to perfection. El Gaucho Restaurant also boasts the biggest shishkebab in the Caribbean, as well as a varied menu of fresh local fish and seafood, and everyone's favorite cut of steak and ribs.

2009 has brought some welcome changes; an expanded food and wine menu and the restaurant is now open on Sundays. A variety of lamb and veal dishes now garnish the menu, as well as a hearty 20-oz rib eye to satisfy your appetite.

El Gaucho Restaurant is open for lunch and dinner Monday through Saturday from 11:30 a.m. until 11:00 p.m., and on Sunday from 5:30 p.m.. Visit their online guestbook at www.elgaucho-aruba.com, and peruse the glorious praise their receive from their devoted fans, as well as the updated menu.

Harry Potter fans swarm new theme park

ORLANDO, Florida – "Harry Potter" star Daniel Radcliffe led groups of excited kids dressed in Hogwarts uniforms as the Wizarding World of Harry Potter theme park officially opened yesterday to long lines and snarled traffic.

Radcliffe, Rupert Grint who plays the boy wizard's best friend Ron Weasley, and other actors from the blockbuster movie and book series, were on hand at Universal Orlando as fans lined up more than eight hours to be among the first visitors.

Before dawn, the backup of Potter fans began to block the main highway through Orlando near the entrances to Universal, prompting the theme park to open its parking garage at 5 a.m. -- 30 minutes earlier than planned, according to local media.

Visitors said that by 8:30 a.m. the line to get inside wrapped around the exterior of Universal's Islands of Adventure park, of which the Wizarding World is one of six unique sections. And the wait for the signature ride, the Forbidden Journey, reached at least 90 minutes, at one point.

"It was worth it, just because I'm a Harry Potter fanatic," said Kelsey Rigg, 18, a British transplant to Florida who at 3 a.m. joined a crowd of several hundred people.

Universal executives did not immediately have information about crowd size.

The 20-acre Harry Potter park reportedly cost $250 million to build and recreates the Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry

Vatican beatifies Blues Brothers ... well almost

VATICAN CITY — Jake and Elwood, the loveable if hapless characters played by John Belushi and Dan Aykroyd in the classic 1980 film The Blues Brothers, have finally gotten Vatican recognition for their "Mission from God."

To mark this week's 30th anniversary of the film, which became a cult classic and spawned a fashion of wearing black hats and dark sunglasses to parties, the Vatican newspaper dedicated a full page and no fewer than five articles to it.

One of the articles says there is "no lack of evidence" that The Blues Brothers can be considered "a Catholic film."

It notes that Jake's release from prison and the commitment by him and Elwood to put their blues revival band back together to raise money to save an orphanage from forced closure has parallels with the Biblical story of the prodigal son.

Jake and Elwood -- who say they are on a "mission from God" to raise the money to pay a back tax bill for the orphanage -- and the band members, are symbols of "redemption obtained with sacrifice."

The newspaper also notes that the film is sprinkled with Catholic and moral references such as the nun Sister Mary Stigmata, who they call "The Penguin."

Elwood even passes up a chance for a one-night stand with a woman played by Twiggy in order to fulfill the mission, it says.

"This is a memorable film, and, judging by the facts, a Catholic one," the newspaper said.

Lennon lyrics fetch $1.2M at NYC auction

NEW YORK — John Lennon's handwritten lyrics to the final song on the classic Beatles album "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" were purchased by an American collector on Friday for $1.2 million.

The winning bid for "A Day in the Life" was placed by phone at Sotheby's auction house, which declined to identify the collector further.

The price exceeded the pre-sale estimate of $500,000 and $800,000.

The double-sided sheet of paper features Lennon's edits and corrections in his own hand — in black felt marker and blue ball point pen, with a few annotations in red ink.

Rolling Stone magazine listed "A Day in the Life" at No. 26 in its compilation of the 500 Greatest Songs of All Time and "Sgt. Pepper" won four Grammy awards in 1968.

The lyrics, which begin with "I read the news today, oh boy," stirred controversy when the Beatles released the album in 1967. The song was banned by the BBC because it twice features the line, "I'd love to turn you on," which was interpreted as supporting illegal drug use. The song was also left off copies of "Sgt. Pepper's" sold in several Asian countries for the same reason.

The album's "Lucy in the Sky with Diamonds" was alleged to have glorified the use of the hallucinogenic LSD, a claim that bandmembers denied.

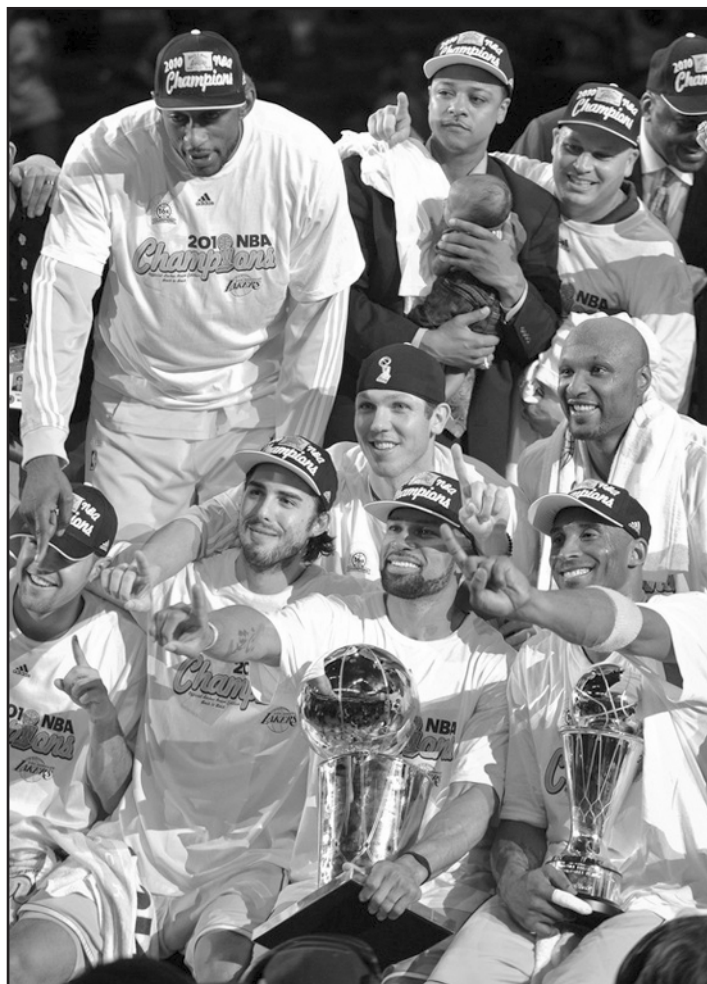

In addition, "A Day in the Life" features the lyric "he blew his mind out in a car," which Beatles aficionados claim is a reference to the accidental death of Tara Browne, the Guinness heir and close friend of both Lennon and Paul McCartney.

The lyrics appear on both sides of the single sheet. One side has Lennon's original first draft, written in a hurried cursive script. The other side is written almost entirely in capital letters and incorporates the corrections from the first draft and adds the words, "I'd love to turn you on."

Sotheby's said the lyrics were consigned by a private collector. Friday's price came close to the $1.25 million paid in 2005 for the Beatles lyrics "All You Need is Love," it said. It sold to an anonymous bidder at the British auction house Cooper Owen.

Lakers edge Celtics in Game 7, win 16th title

LOS ANGELES — Kobe Bryant sprinted after the ball, which Lamar Odom joyously flung downcourt to burn the remaining seconds in Game 7 of the NBA finals. With the celebration starting behind him, Bryant chased it down and then held it aloft to his teammates.

The Los Angeles Lakers' 16th championship was secure following a gritty 83-79 victory over the Boston Celtics. Bryant's legs may have been dead, but he didn't stop running until the buzzer.

The two-time finals MVP has a ring for every finger on one hand precisely because he never slows down, even with injuries, the Celtics' defense and his own erratic shot conspiring against him. That's why this ring will have a special place in his collection, and this banner in the Staples Center rafters will loom a little larger than the rest to Kobe.

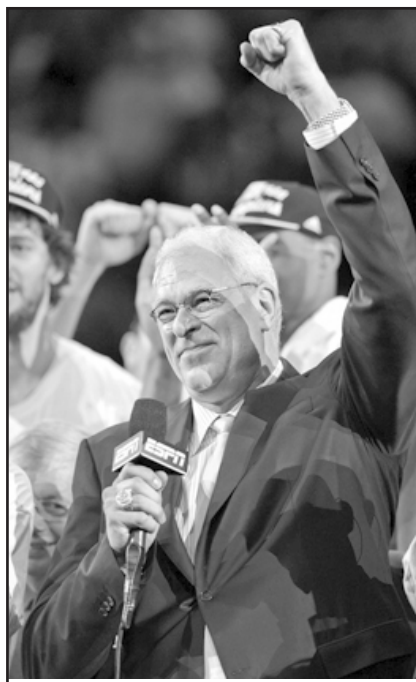

"I wanted it so, so bad,"

Bryant said. "On top of that, I was on E. Man, I was really, really tired, and the more I tried to push, the more it kept getting away from me."

Out of an unsightly 6-for-24 shooting performance, Bryant led the Lakers to a sweet repeat with 23 points and 15 rebounds Thursday night. While he could barely make a shot or even hold onto the ball at times, Bryant relentlessly drove the lane to earn nine free throws in the fourth quarter while Los Angeles erased a 13-point second-half deficit.

The Lakers earned their rings by winning a gritty, grind-it-out Game 7 for the first time in their franchises' history.

"This one is by far the sweetest, because it's them," Bryant said after the Lakers beat Boston for the first time in a Game 7. "This was the hardest one by far. I wanted it so bad, and sometimes when you want it so bad, it slips away from you. My guys picked me up."

While the basketball in Game 7 wasn't terribly attractive, as evidenced by the Lakers' 32.5 percent shooting and 12 missed free throws alongside the Celtics' 15 turnovers and 53-40 rebounding disadvantage, the teams' collective will and determination still were stirring—and they'll only get more beautiful with age.

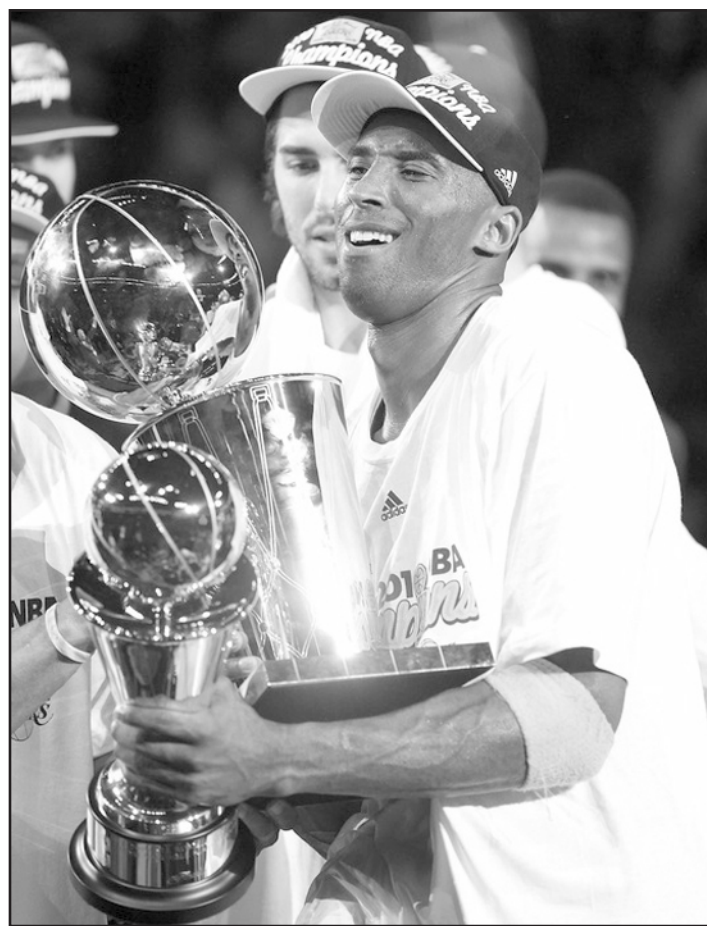

Lakers coach Phil Jackson also has his 11th championship, matching Boston great Bill Russell's total and possibly putting a cap on Jackson's remarkable career if he decides to leave the Lakers. The Zen Master will have trouble walking away from the chance for a fourth threepeat next year.

"Well, it's done. It wasn't well done, but it was done," Jackson said. "I thought our defense was terrific. We were able to step in and play the kind of defense that we've established as a calling card for this team, and we found a way to generate some points."

Exactly two years to the day after Boston beat the Lakers by 39 points to clinch the 2008 title, Los Angeles got revenge for perhaps the most embarrassing loss of Bryant's career—even if that revenge was as cold as Bryant's jumper.

Bryant said he had to downplay the magnitude of the rivalry during the series, but he came clean while sitting at the podium with his daughters, Natalia and Gianna.

"I was just lying to you guys," Bryant said. "When you're in the moment, you have to suppress that ... but you guys know what a student I am of the game. I know every series the Lakers have played in, and I know every Celtics series. I know every statistic. It meant the world to me, but I couldn't focus on that. I had to focus on playing."

And when Bryant was asked what the title means to him personally, he answered without self-censorship: "Just got one more than Shaq. You can take that to the bank. You know how I am. I don't forget anything."

As if anybody could forget, Shaquille O'Neal and Bryant teamed up for three titles from 2000-02, with Shaq winning his fourth in 2006 with Miami. The Lakers' last two belong to Bryant and Pau Gasol.

The Celtics had never lost a seventh game in the finals. Despite nursing a lead through most of the night while holding the Lakers to that ridiculously low shooting percentage, Boston couldn't close it out on the coast, becoming just the seventh team to blow a 3-2 finals lead after winning Game 5.

Boston faces even more offseason uncertainty than the Lakers, with Allen's free agency and coach Doc Rivers' decision atop the list.

The Lakers will hold a parade Monday, with the team riding floats from Staples Center down Figueroa Street to the USC campus in downtown Los Angeles. A rally at the Coliseum last year attracted 95,000 fans, but the Lakers are skipping the arena in favor of a more interactive celebration.

The Los Angeles Lakers say they'll pay for Monday's NBA championship victory celebration, a more modest event than in past years.

Lakers spokesman John Black said the team anticipates spending around $2 million, including police overtime and other city services.

From Maradona with love: Argentina gelling

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—Expect Maradona to turn up at Argentina's next match in a tie-dye T-shirt, waving incense sticks and singing "Kumbayah." Because his masterplan for winning the World Cup is now crystal clear: He'll do it by smothering his players in lashings of love.

Just a few months back, Maradona was in the doghouse, banned by FIFA, for a foul-mouthed rant. Now he's donning a suit for games and talking like a New Age guru of the "good vibes" in the Argentine camp, of the "very beautiful" experience of living another World Cup and about how footballers respond better to heart-to-heart talks than to big sticks.

Most striking of all, Maradona showers his players with kisses and hugs both before and after games. Tough taskmasters like England coach Fabio Capello wouldn't be caught dead doling out so much as pecks on the cheek. But Maradona grabs hold and won't let go, nuzzling players affectionately with his graying beard. No one gets left out.

"All the love is just being grateful for their effort," says the cuddly one.

Bizarrely, the softly-softly approach seems to be working. The very difficult birth of Maradona's team—he looked at more than 100 players before deciding on his 23 for South Africa and came within a whisker of not qualifying—is slowly being forgotten with each, progressively more convincing World Cup performance. Argentina is still a work in progress but is gelling before our eyes.

Few would have bet on that happening before the World Cup. With Maradona in charge, there seemed to be a huge risk of it simply imploding. Now, it already has one foot and four toes in the next round, after humbling South Korea 4-1 to give it six points at the top of Group B.

Lionel Messi, the player Maradona will most need if Argentina is to reach the final on July 11, is starting to look genuinely comfortable. That has been a long time coming but was so worth the wait.

Messi used to wear the No.10 shirt that Maradona made famous as a player like a lead-weight, bowed by the huge burden of Argentine expectations. Now radiating confidence in South Africa just when it counts the most, Messi is beginning to fully express his absurd abundance and array of talents, making if not yet scoring goals. He played a role in three of the four Argentine goals against the South Koreans.

The Argentine frontline combination of Tevez, Messi and Gonzalo Higuain looks like it could score goals by the bucket-load. They each bring different weapons to the fight. Tevez wins and keeps balls with his sheep-dog-like energy and bulldog-like tenacity. Messi cuts through sides with his sudden accelerations and ball glued to his laces. Higuain brings strength and height—he scored two of his three goals Thursday with his head.

The three of them are not always finding and linking up with other.

Clearly, Maradona's love alone won't win the World Cup for Argentina. But it certainly helps.

FIFA World CUP South Africa 2010

Germany loses to Serbia 1-0; England draws with Algeria 0-0, US draws with Slovenia 2-2

JOHANNESBURG — Germany lost a player, missed a penalty and lacked a scorer at the World Cup on Friday, losing 1-0 to Serbia in Group D and making progress to the knockout round much more difficult.

England also made it tough on itself in Group C after being held to a 0-0 draw by Algeria, while the United States came back from two goals down to draw 2-2 with Slovenia.

The three-time world champion Germans lost striker Miroslav Klose to a second yellow card in the 37th minute, and Milan Jovanovic scored a minute later to give Serbia its first World Cup win as an independent nation.

"It was a difficult game, a very important game for us," said Serbia goalkeeper Vladimir Stojkovic, who saved a penalty from Lukas Podolski and was voted man of the match. "This is a great victory for all of us. We have showed we are a good team and we believe in ourselves."

The last time Germany lost a group match was in 1986, but the team still reached the final that year.

Milan Jovanovic of Serbia celebrates scoring a goal past Manuel Neuer of Germany

Jovanovic beat Germany goalkeeper Manuel Neuer in the 38th minute with the side of his foot in Port Elizabeth.

Serbia's win left both teams with three points in the group. Ghana and Australia play Saturday.

"We beat Germany," Jovanovic said, "and it's something real big for us."

Podolski missed his penalty in the 60th, shooting weakly at Stojkovic. The Serbs earned the spot kick when Nemanja Vidic handled the ball in the area.

The last time Germany missed a non-shootout penalty at a World Cup was in 1974, a miss by Uli Hoessgen against Poland.

Klose was given yellow cards in the 12th and 37th minutes, the first seemed unlucky but the latter was for a rough tackle.

"Football is a contact sport and one factor should be whether there was malice and intention," said Klose, who has scored 11 World Cup goals. "I thought I went after the ball."

Algeria held England scoreless in Cape Town and left the 1966 champions needing a win against Slovenia to ensure advancement.

"We weren't aggressive enough," England captain Steven Gerrard said. "We never had the cutting edge."

England coach Fabio Capello started with David James in net instead of Robert Green, whose blunder against the United States cost the English three points.

Michael Bradley and Landon Donovan gave the United States another point in Group C, each scoring in the second half at Ellis Park.

narrow angle in the 48th minute for his 43rd international goal, and Bradley put in the equalizer in the 82nd from Jozy Altidore's header.

The Americans thought they had a winner in the 86th, but substitute Maurice Edu's volley was disallowed for a foul.

"I'm a little gutted to be honest," Donovan said. "I don't know how they stole that last goal from us ... I'm not sure what the call was. He (the referee) wouldn't tell us what the call was."

Slovenia now leads the group with four points, followed by England and the United States with two each. Algeria has one point.

Valter Birsa scored in the 13th minute and Zlatan Ljubijankic doubled the score for Slovenia in the 42nd.

In Tembisa, the four North Korean football players reported as "missing" turned up for World Cup practice.

The four players missed North Korea's match Tuesday against Brazil. FIFA denied the players were ever missing and said they were left out of Tuesday's lineup because of a technical error.
